Oldest Alumnus 86.

Thousands of Yale men came to town to-day to join those already here in celebrating alumni day. The oldest re-union class here in numbers was the class of 1865, with Henry L. Stimson of New York, member of ex-President Taft's Cabinet, as speaker and leader. The class of '55 was represented by one member, Giles Potter of this city, who is 86 years old.

One of the events of the day was the president Timothy L. Dwight. His entrance was the signal for a rousing cheer and the audience remained standing until he took his place on the platform. He is 87 years old.

The biggest feature of the day was the parade through the streets of the town to Yale Field on the part of the thousands of alumni in fancy garb. A placard carried by 1909, Sheffield, atplacard carried by 1909. Shemed, at tracted a good deal of comment along the line of march. PELL SUIT VERDICT IS EXPECTED TO-DAY

Testimony Finished and Both Sides Are Ready to Sum Up for Jury.

Mrs. Elizabeth Warden Pell looked relieved when it was announced at noon vesterday that no more testimony would be taken in her suit for $250,000 against the Long Island Railroad for the death trial more than a week before Justice Aspinall and jury in the Queens county Supreme Court. Mrs. Nathalie S. Laimbeer, who is suing the railroad for $250,000 for the death of her husband and $250,000 addi-tional for injuries which she suffered

Pell, expects a verdict for a large amount, and Martin W. Littleton, for the railroad, is satisfied he has shown that the railroad was not at fault. It was agreed at the adjournment of court that both sides will sum up this morning, when the court will charge the jury and under ordinary conditions a verdict may be expected late in the afternoon.

At the opening of court in the morning Mr. Van Wyck called Louis P. Elsemere of 131 East Twenty-sixth street, Manhattan, a former secretary to Mr. Pell, and Adolph C. Grubner, 217 Main the tunnel project, from its inception in July twenty-eight years ago. He said it represented an investment of more than $10,000,000 to the Interborough company and was sold to the city for $3,000,000.

August Belmont, who financed the tunnel and then had to give it up because obstacles prevented its completion before the time limit expired in 1907. Said he hoped it would be an object lesson, causing the public to cooperate instead of interfering with men who tried to render the public a service. Other speakers were Borough President Connolly and Vice-Presidents George J. Ryand and John Adikes of the Queens Chamber of Commerce.

A. Gordon Murray and C. Elsmants.

Broughham, attorneys for the claimants, the contended that the Titanic was not properly constructed with a view to absolute safety, as her watertight doors were not as strong as they should have been and as she was without watertight decks, longitudinal bulkheads or an intervention to the field at a speed of twenty-two and one-half nautical miles an hour, which would have been too high under the circumstances, even waiving the consideration that the speakers were Borough President Connolly and Vice-Presidents George J.

Ryand and John Adikes of the Queens Chamber of Commerce.
